

“CELEBRATING ACCOMPLISHMENTS”

Welcome to the inaugural issue of PATHWAYS, our newsletter for alumni and friends of NC State's College of Humanities and Social Sciences.

Next year will be CHASS's 40th Anniversary. Few would have projected that we would now be N.C. State's third largest college. Our commitment is to making a difference in the classroom, in the community and around the world. We have set a high priority on merit scholarships for undergraduates, linked to service learning and engagement in our communities. We are challenging our faculty to participate in engagement sabbaticals, during which they expand their horizons, apply their expertise to real world problems, and bring an enriched perspective back into the classroom.

In short, we are embarked on a mission to reinvent liberal arts education at NC State to meet the challenges of the 21st century. We need to move beyond our traditional ways of doing business, to reshape our organizations, and to focus our resources on the great problems we confront as a society and as a world. As an educational institution, we need to establish greater expectations, for ourselves and for our students.

The workforce needs nimble thinkers and creative problem-solvers able to deal with complex challenges. Liberal education exposes students to diverse ways of thinking associated with creativity and the search for knowledge. Democratic societies depend on an educated citizenry, a civic culture, and knowledge of the world around us.

continued on page 3

CHASS
A WOLF IN SHEEP'S CLOTHING

NOVEMBER 2002
VOL. 1 EDITION 1

PATHWAYS

A RESOURCE FOR THE NATION IN RESEARCH ETHICS

From genetically modified foods to racial profiling, research ethics issues are hotter than ever. This is especially true at NC State, one of the country's largest Research I institutions.

Enter Dr. Gary L.

Comstock, the new director of the NC State Research Ethics Program and Professor of Philosophy in the College of Humanities and Social Sciences.

Comstock joined CHASS on August 15. Prior to his arrival, he was professor of religious studies at Iowa State University. He founded the Iowa State University Bioethics Institute, a faculty development workshop that has helped hundreds of life scientists from around the world integrate discussions of ethics into their courses.

continued on page 2

continued from page 1

A RESOURCE IN RESEARCH...

In addition to his teaching, Comstock will serve as director of the University's Research Ethics Program. The program is designed to encourage discussion among faculty of ethical issues in research. The program also will focus on broader social questions such as the environment and research with animals. "We want to become the nation's resource for research ethics, to be a place where people go to learn more about these issues," he said.

Goals

Starting with graduate classes, Comstock hopes the Research Ethics Program will eventually integrate ethics into classes and labs across campus in addition to classes already offered in areas of ethics.

We want to become the nation's resource for research ethics, to be a place where people go to learn more...

As for his personal goals, Comstock has high hopes. "I would like to speak with every faculty member on this campus interested in research ethics. There are a lot of resources here, particularly in CHASS, and I would like to learn about them."

With more than fifty articles and book chapters to his credit, Comstock has lectured in Asia, Europe, Central America, the Middle East, and Canada. He holds a master's degree in Divinity and a doctoral degree in Religion and Literature from the University of Chicago Divinity School, and bachelor's degrees in Religious Studies and English Literature from Wheaton College.

CHASS CELEBRATES DISTINGUISHED ALUMNI

During an October reception at the NC Museum of History, Dr. Julia T. Wood (Communication, 1972) was honored as the 2002 CHASS Distinguished Alumna. Wood, Lineberger Distinguished Professor of Humanities in the Department of Communication Studies at UNC-Chapel Hill, is a renowned leader in the academic study of communication.

Wood is pictured above, with (left to right) Craig Smith, head of the Department of Communication; CHASS Dean Linda P. Brady; and J. Robert Cox, Wood's spouse.

Among a long list of honors, Dr. Wood is ranked the #1 author of books among communication scholars. Among a long list of awards and achievements, she was presented the Teaching and Learning Scholar Award for 2000 by the Carnegie Foundation and the National Communication Association.

The College also honored Chris Hondros (English, 1993) as 2002 Outstanding Young Alumnus. An accomplished photojournalist, Hondros has worked in Kosovo, Afghanistan, and Israel to record and clarify complex world events.

CHASS departments also recognized several outstanding alumni: Thomas Reid Pearson (English, 1978), Dr. Guy M. Arcuri (Foreign Languages and Literatures, 1985), Dr. Michael Durfee (Multi-disciplinary Studies, 2000), Richard Noel Gusler (Political Science and Public Administration, 1972), Dr. Linda M. Lobao (Sociology and Anthropology, 1986) and Jeffrey Woodard (Social Work, 1982).

Joseph and Robin Gaitens (Communication, 1990) and Deirdre Dilworth (Foreign Languages and Literatures, 1997) received Outstanding Young Alumni honors.

CHASS GETS NEW LOOK ON THE WEB

Just in time for the fall semester, CHASS launched a brand new website, designed to have greater functionality, increased content, current news and more interactive opportunities for CHASS audiences.

We'd like to hear from you! Please visit the site — www.chass.ncsu.edu — and share your interesting news with us in the "Alumni, Parents and Friends" section. The site will continue to grow, with new features, content and photography, so keep an eye out.

NEW DIGS FOR CHASS EXTENSION AND ENGAGEMENT

On September 25, the College celebrated the completion of a major renovation of 219 Oberlin Road, the new home of several College extension and engagement programs, including ESL, Social Work and Humanities Extension. Choate Construction Company coordinated several other contractors to donate all products and services. Cutting the ceremonial ribbon are (left to right): Perry Safran of Safran Law Offices and member of the CHASS Board of Advisors; CHASS Dean Linda P. Brady; David Marshall, President of Choate Construction Company's Raleigh Division; and NC State Provost Stuart L. Cooper.

ENGLISH PROFESSOR MAKES HIS MARK

For Dr. Robert Kochersberger, it seems far-fetched that his scholarly interest would reach people across the country, affixed to envelopes and packages in their mailboxes. But his research on muckraking journalist Ida Tarbell has helped shape a brand-new postage stamp in her honor.

A little over a year ago, Kochersberger was called upon to consult on the development of the stamp featuring Tarbell, one of a dozen journalists known as muckrakers in the early 1900s for their efforts to expose the wrongdoings committed by corporate America and government. Regarded as an expert on Tarbell, Kochersberger wrote his first book about her, "More than a Muckraker: Ida Tarbell's Lifetime in Journalism," and now is working on a second. His book was used to develop the biographical material that accompanies the stamp, and as consultant, he checked the accuracy of the biographical data, Tarbell's photo, and the arrangement of the text on the stamp.

Kochersberger, a former journalist who teaches news editing and writing, has

"She was a journalist like practically nobody had seen ... I've thought for a long time that she never got her due."

long been a Tarbell admirer. "She was a journalist like practically nobody had seen ... I've thought for a long time that she never got her due."

Tarbell is best known for her powerful expose on the Standard Oil Company in its attempt to monopolize the oil industry in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. She wrote a 13-part series in McClure's magazine that led to antitrust legislation that dismantled the company.

Kochersberger continues to examine more than 400 pages of raw material for his next book on Tarbell. In the meantime, he's enjoying her unique return to fame. "I think she's coming into her own, becoming more popular again," he said. "I plan to buy a lot of these stamps and use them on everything!"

continued from page 1

FROM THE DEAN'S OFFICE: CELEBRATING...

Liberal education, in its ideal form, links students, and faculty with the communities we serve — locally, nationally and globally.

We want NC State students to leave with the foundation for lifelong learning, with stimulated imaginations, fueled intellectual curiosity, increased confidence, and a commitment to serve their communities. We challenge our students to find their passion, and live it.

In this and subsequent issues of PATHWAYS, meet CHASS faculty members, students, and staff engaged in teaching, research, and extension activities. You also will hear news of your alumni friends who are using their talents in rewarding and purposeful careers and who are giving back to their communities. Each has found his or her passion, and is living it — and that excitement is contagious!

CHASS has embarked on a new and exciting journey. Come join us, as we explore new PATHWAYS in shaping the future of liberal arts education.

Linda P. Brady
Dean

PATHWAYS

NOVEMBER 2002 • VOL: 1 EDITION: 1

COLLEGE OF HUMANITIES AND SOCIAL SCIENCES
NC STATE UNIVERSITY
Campus Box 8101, 106 Caldwell Hall,
Raleigh, NC 27695
919.515.2468 • www.chass.ncsu.edu

Dr. Linda P. Brady, dean
Suzanne Jacovec, writer and editor

PATHWAYS is published by NC State's College of Humanities and Social Sciences for its alumni, friends and supporters. Correspondence, alumni updates and address corrections may be sent to:

PATHWAYS
College of Humanities and Social Sciences
NC State University
Campus Box 8101, 106 Caldwell Hall
Raleigh, NC 27695

20,500 copies of this public document were produced at a cost of 25¢ per copy

SOIOLOGY AND ANTHROPOLOGY

"Our department is large and diverse. Our faculty excel in teaching, research and extension. We maintain a tradition of excellence in education, service, and the pursuit of innovative research."

The department has 32 faculty members and 20 part-time instructors, 600 undergraduate majors and 75 full-time graduate students. Two new degree programs, a bachelor's degree in Criminology and a bachelor's degree in Anthropology, complement our existing undergraduate degrees in Applied Sociology and Sociology.

We have made a special commitment to study abroad by designing scholarships for high-achieving majors to broaden their educations in international programs. Additionally, two department faculty members have established study abroad programs, in Guatemala and Italy.

Our graduate programs are the Master of Arts in Sociology, the Master of Science in Sociology and Doctor of Philosophy in Sociology. A major goal for the program is to achieve a top-30 national ranking, and we are making steady progress. In fact, one of our specialty graduate concentrations ranks 16th in the nation.

"We maintain a tradition of excellence in education, service, and the pursuit of innovative research."

To assist graduate students in preparing for the job market, we have joined an initiative, created by the American Association of Colleges and Universities, the National Science Foundation, and the Council of Graduate Schools, called "Preparing Future Faculty." Participation in the program helps graduate students to become better teachers through mentoring and opportunities to experience faculty life at a variety of institutions.

PSYCHOLOGY

The Psychology department has been experiencing rapid change. Now in CHASS rather than in the College of Education and Psychology, we believe the realignment has been positive, both for the department and for the college.

Psychology now has 573 undergraduate majors, more than twice that of a decade ago, even while retaining some of the toughest entrance standards in the university. We have an active disciplinary honors program and an HRD option that allows students to participate in research internships.

At the graduate level, time to doctoral degree has decreased from over 10 years to between five and six years, so we are awarding more Ph.D.s each year. The number of graduate specialty areas has been streamlined to five: ergonomics/experimental, developmental, industrial/organizational, psychology in the public interest, and school. Last year we hired four excellent new faculty, and this year we plan to hire three to five more. By tailoring graduate areas and adding outstanding faculty, we will move each program into the top 10 national rankings, a goal several of our programs have already achieved.

Active researchers in the scientist-practitioner model, our faculty bring in $1.2 million annually in external funding, a four-fold increase over the past decade. In the university's land-grant tradition, we are proud that our research findings and scholarship improve people's lives on a daily basis.

The Psychology department is moving forward, providing excellent undergraduate instruction, training the next generation of doctoral psychologists who enter the work force able to solve real-world problems, and producing research results that improve the human condition.

ENGLISH

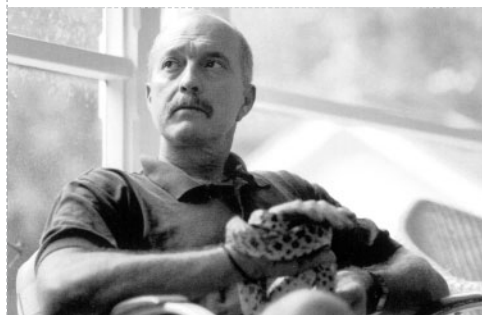

Under new head Mary Helen Thuente, the English department added eight new faculty in 2002 and proposed three new graduate degree programs: a Masters of Arts in Teaching, a Master of Fine Arts in Creative Writing, and an interdisciplinary Ph.D. (with the Department of Communication) in Communication, Rhetoric, and Digital Media.

The department currently registers 416 undergraduate majors, with the majority of students in two programs: the traditional B.A. in English and the B.A. degree with a concentration in writing and editing. Our remaining undergraduate students are enrolled in the teacher education program, the Bachelor of Science in English degree program, or are working toward a B.A. with a concentration in World Literature.

Of 84 graduate students seeking M.A. degrees, 20 are in the Creative Writing Program, eight in Rhetoric and Composition, and the remainder in World literature, Film, Linguistics, and British and American Literature. An additional 38 students are enrolled in the M.S. in Technical Communications program. The department plans to launch a new curriculum next fall, including a new program in creative writing.

English faculty published nine books, 60+ book chapters and articles, 35 book reviews and 31 creative works. Several also received College teaching and advising honors.

Sadly, the English Department lost one of its finest teachers and the state one of its finest writers with the death of novelist Tim McLaurin late this summer.

In memory of Tim McLaurin, who taught Creative Writing in the English department for 12 years.

FOREIGN LANGUAGES AND LITERATURES

Dr. Lawrence Hinkle, Department Head from 1916-1956, wrote: "The importance of languages in education goes without question. Never has there been greater need for mutual agreement amongst the people of the earth." This statement rings even truer today as we face the challenges of our times.

With the expanding need for cross-cultural communication, the Department's programs are indispensable to NC State's educational mission. Expertise in foreign languages, comprising both language skills and cultural knowledge, is essential for future leaders. Our programs, gaining in stature statewide, and scholars of international distinction offer excellent resources to students. Some of our current accomplishments are:

- Study abroad programs in France, Mexico, Peru, Spain, Austria, China, Japan, and India. Study Abroad Scholarships for Foreign Language majors and minors.
- New courses such as Spanish for Engineers, The Visual Arts in France, and Arabic Language & Culture.

- An expanded English as a Second Language Program, offering an ESL licensure program, supported by a $1.25 million grant from the US Department of Education, as well as a Summer Institute for international students.
- A curriculum in World Literature (with the English department) that offers such courses as Masterpieces of World Literature and Contemporary Latin-American Literature.
- Distance-learning courses offered in Spanish, Hindi, English as a Second Language, and World Literature.
- Winner of NC State's 2001 Departmental Award for Teaching & Learning Excellence.
- A state-of-the-art Foreign Language Technology Center.

Students on a recent study abroad trip to Spain pose in front of a fountain in La Granja, near Segovia.

POLITICAL SCIENCE AND PUBLIC ADMINISTRATION

The department is experiencing rapid growth in both graduate and undergraduate programs.

Two years ago, the faculty launched "Political Science 2000," a new curriculum designed to help students see the relevance of political science to their interests in local, national and global affairs. PS 2000 has introduced service and experiential learning, enhanced internship opportunities, increased emphasis on student activities, and new faculty. Concentrations include Law and Justice, Public Policy, American Politics, International Politics and Secondary Teacher Education. In addition to attracting record enrollments, the new curriculum is experiencing a rapid increase in honors and scholarship students.

At the graduate level, the Master of International Studies has 40 students and an excellent record of placing students in internships and international positions. The Ph.D. in Public Administration is reaching maturity, as two students have completed the doctorate and three have academic positions. The Master of Public Administration was recently reorganized to focus on information technology, nonprofit management and urban/local management. It remains the department's largest graduate program.

Raleigh Mayor Charles Meeker speaks to NC State inductees of Pi Sigma Alpha, the national political science honor society, in a November reception in their honor.

The Administrative Officers Management Program is for law enforcement administrators. It is a Continuing Education certificate program that boasts over 1000 grads, and is one of the most affordable programs associated with a nationally accredited public management program.

Our faculty continue to excel in teaching, research and service, winning a variety of statewide and university awards. In total, the faculty authored six books and 22 journal articles during the past year in an active program of research and publication.

"The Administrative Officers Management Program is one of the most affordable programs of its kind..."

CREATIVE WRITING PROGRAM

The last year has been exciting for the Creative Writing Program. A proposal for an M.F.A. in Creative Writing has been submitted to the university for approval. Dr. John Kessel has been appointed Director of the program, and two new faculty have been hired. John Balaban, noted poet (Locusts at the Edge of Summer, Words for My Daughter), memoirist (Remembering Heaven's Face), editor and translator (Spring Essence), and two-time nominee for the National Book Award in poetry, and Wilton Barnhardt, novelist (Emma Who Saved My Life, Gospel, Show World), bring the total tenured creative writing faculty to four.

Our outreach to students and the larger Triangle writing community continues with two new additions to our already healthy roster of literary events: The first Distinguished Visiting Writer, novelist and short-story writer Richard Bausch, came to campus in Fall 2002 for seminars, workshops and a reading. This will be an annual event featuring a nationally known author.

This spring we will begin the N.C. Writers' Guest Residency, featuring North Carolina poet Gerald Barrax, who has a long association with our program. Barrax, like future guests in the series, will teach for a semester and present a public reading. March 2003 brings the NC State Poetry Festival, featuring seminars, special guests (poet and translator Eleanor Wilner), readings and a literary contest with prizes.

Throughout the year, the Guy Owens-Tom Walters Reading Series brings a steady supply of poets and writers to campus for readings and special events. All readings are free and open to the public.

For more information about these and other happenings in the Creative Writing Program, visit us at <http://english.chass.ncsu.edu/creativewriting/>.

This is the first in a series of special reports on CHASS Centers and Programs.

NEW DEPARTMENTAL LEADERSHIP

CHASS recently welcomed two new department heads: Dr. Craig Allen Smith in Communication and Dr. Jonathan K. Ocko in History.

On August 1, Dr. Craig Allen Smith joined CHASS as the new head of the department of Communication. Smith comes to NC State from Wayne State University, where he was professor of Communication and chair of the department of Communication.

Smith specializes in political communication, with a focus on the presidency of the United States. He has published four books and myriad journal articles. Smith earned master's and doctoral degrees in Communication from Purdue University, and a bachelor's degree in Speech and Government from Baldwin-Wallace College.

"What we do here is teach students to communicate effectively, but this way, first they'll have to learn how to communicate ethically."

One of Smith's biggest goals for the semester is to bring ethics into classroom discussions. "I'd like to have a series of discussions about where communication ethics fit into the classroom," he said. "What we do here is teach students to communicate effectively, but this way, first they'll have to learn how to communicate ethically."

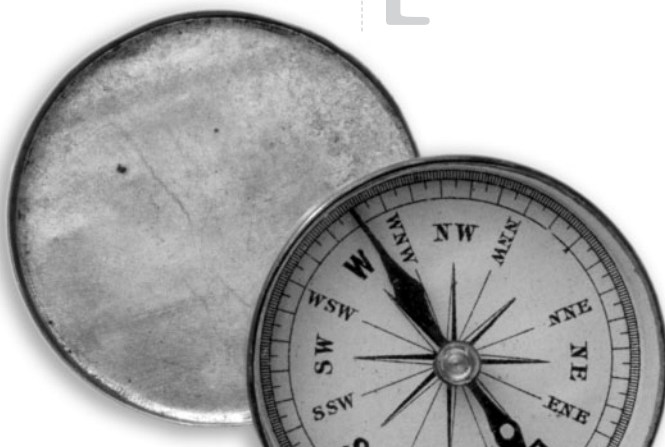

Dr. Jonathan Ocko, NC State professor of modern Chinese History, was named head of the department of History on July 1.

Before joining the NC State faculty in 1977, Ocko taught at Clark University and Wellesley College. He also is an adjunct professor of Legal History at Duke Law School.

Ocko's research and publications focus on Chinese legal history and contemporary Chinese civil law. His present work deals with traditional concepts of justice, mediation in Chinese culture, and the concept of contract in Chinese economic culture. Ocko earned a bachelor's degree in History from Trinity College (CT) in 1966, and a master's in East Asian Studies and doctorate in History from Yale University in 1970 and 1975, respectively.

Ocko's goals include faculty development, improved undergraduate research opportunities and upgraded facilities. A top priority is "to increase and stabilize the numbers of undergraduate majors while at the same time maintaining the quality of our students," he said.

A top priority is "to increase and stabilize the numbers of undergraduate majors while at the same time maintaining the quality of our students."

2002 CHASS BOARD OF ADVISORS

CHASS alumni involvement in our development efforts is strong. Our Board of Advisors numbers 33, of whom 23 are CHASS or NC State alumni.

2002 President, Kathy Council, '74 M.S. Statistics. Kathy is currently Vice President, Publications, at SAS Institute and lives in Raleigh.

2003 President Elect, Elizabeth Beam. Elizabeth is a Meredith grad, currently the Director of Choral Music at St. Mary's School, Director for the Cardinal Singers sponsored by the City of Raleigh, voice teacher with the Bel Canto Music Studio, and very active volunteer in the Raleigh community.

Larry D. Barbour, '71 Political Science. Larry is currently President and CEO of the North State Bank in Raleigh.

Mark T. Calloway, '80 Political Science. After serving as U.S. Attorney for Western NC and Executive Director of the Office of U.S. Attorneys, Mark is now with Alston & Bird, LLP in Charlotte.

Greg Carr, '90 Business Management. Greg is Senior Vice President in the Corporate Banking Department of Wachovia in Raleigh.

Chris Corchiani, '97 Communication. Chris continues to play basketball in Europe and owns a pizza restaurant in Raleigh.

Laura A. Edgerton, '90 Political Science. Laura is an attorney with Raleigh firm Maupin Taylor and Ellis, specializing in immigration law.

Chana Ferrell. Chana is with Choate Construction Company where she manages Business Development and Marketing.

Betty Fried, '83 English. Betty is retired from SAS Institute where she was Director of Community Relations. She lives in Raleigh.

Leland E. Garrett, Jr., '71 Chemical Engineering. Lee is a medical doctor with Wake Nephrology Associates in Raleigh.

Barbara L. Goodmon, 2000 M.A.L.S. Barbara is extremely involved in the Triangle Community, currently serving as Chair of the Board for Wake County Human Services.

Richard N. Gusler, '78 B.A. Political Science, '80 M.A. Public Administration. Gus has a national practice in entertainment law in Raleigh, the Law Offices of Richard Noel Gusler.

Chris H. Hamlin. Chris joins the board representing the Hamlin Companies. She is an outstanding community volunteer and is recognized at the national level for her work with the Society to Prevent Blindness.

Russell A. Harmon, '96 Communication. After an outstanding career as the manager for Hootie and the Blowfish, Rusty lives in Raleigh and continues to work with rock bands in collaboration with Gus Gusler.

John F. Hester, '72 History. John is Vice President – Claims Counsel for Lawyers Mutual Insurance Company. He is a lawyer who advocates for and represents other lawyers.

Robert F. Lowe. Bob is Chairman/President/CEO of Lexington State Bank in Lexington, NC.

Billy D. Maddalon, '90 Political Science. Billy owns the Morehead Inn and the Van Landingham Estate, both elegant inns in Charlotte.

Morris D. Marley, '72 Economics. Morris is Senior Executive Vice President for Branch Bank and Trust Company in Winston-Salem, NC.

Lucy G. Martindale. Lucy is with LipoScience in Raleigh.

Ellan Hoover Maynard, '74 English, '84 Master of Public Administration. Ellan has worked as a lobbyist. Currently she is an active volunteer, having been president of the board of Wake County Urban Ministries.

Ray Mays, '65 Education, '94 M. A.L.S. Ray retired from IBM and began a second career as Chief Operating Officer at MetaMetrics, Inc., in Durham.

Burley B. Mitchell Jr., '66 Liberal Arts. Since retiring as Chief Justice of the NC Supreme Court, Burley practices law with Womble Carlyle Sandridge and Rice.

William J. O'Neill. Bill is retired from a long career with Readers Digest and Land's End. He has served on the CHASS Board for four years.

Bruce A. Petesch. Bruce is a long-time CHASS Board member, having served two terms as Board president.

He practices employment law with Haynsworth, Baldwin, Johnson & Greaves.

Lonnie C. Poole, III., '85 Aerospace Engineering. Ven Poole is Vice President of Support Services for Waste Industries, Inc. in Raleigh.

Perry R. Safran, '72 Political Science. Perry has built his own law firm, Safran Law Offices, specializing in construction law. He is immediate past president of the CHASS Board.

Eleanor E. Sanford, '78 Statistics, '84 M.S. Psychology, '89 Ph.D. Psychology. Ellie is new to the CHASS Board. Ellie is Director of Technical Research at MetaMetrics, Inc.

Bruce W. Sharpe. Bruce is Senior Vice President with Bank of America in Raleigh.

Henry A. Turlington, '66 Liberal Arts. Henry has just begun to enjoy retirement from his company United Rent All/Party Showcase. His son Brad now runs the businesses, with a little help from Henry.

Richard A. Urquhart III. Richard is Vice President of Finance for Investors Management Corporation, the holding company for Golden Corral, Quick 10, Oh! Briens, and other ventures.

Robert A. Warren Jr. Bob is Senior Vice President at Salomon Smith Barney in Raleigh.

Jeffrey Woodard, '82 Social Work. Jeff is Director of the new Eastern Regional Center, Wake County.

S. Cameron Wright, '88 Political Science. Cameron is a long-time board member and works with Supply Solutions in Charlotte.

CHASS Board of Advisors President Kathy Council, at the College's dedication of 219 Oberlin Road, with Perry Safran, former board president.

SHARE YOUR NEWS

We want to hear from you! As we approach the College's 40th anniversary, we would like to recognize our alumni in as many ways as possible, especially in this newsletter. Please share with us what you've been up to since graduating from CHASS. How has your CHASS degree impacted your life? We're eager to hear your interesting news, such as new jobs, travel, awards, family life, community involvement, personal achievements, etc. Please also include a photo, and be on the lookout for updates on your fellow alumni in future issues of PATHWAYS!

Name: _____

Employer: _____

Degree/Year Awarded: _____

Address: _____

Home Phone: _____

Work Phone: _____

Email: _____

Your News: _____

Mail to:

College of Humanities and Social Sciences, NC State, Box 8101
Raleigh NC 27695-8101.

Fax to: 919.515.9419

Make a Gift

To make a contribution to the College, please complete this form and send it to the CHASS Development Office, NC State, Box 7011, Raleigh, NC 27695-7011. We will contact you about ways to give in your area of interest.

Happy Holidays

NONPROFIT ORG
U.S. POSTAGE PAID
RALEIGH, NC
PERMIT No. 2353

College of Humanities and Social Sciences
NC State University, Box 8101
Raleigh, NC 27695-8101